

The painting 'The Birth of Venus' by Sandro Botticelli depicts the goddess Venus standing on a large, scallop shell. She is nude, with her long, golden hair flowing down her back. To her left, two winged figures, Zephyrus and Chloris, are blowing her towards the shore. To her right, a figure, likely the goddess Minerva, stands in a lush, wooded area, holding a large, patterned cloak. The background shows a calm sea with a small boat and a distant island.

¡¿Tío y la clase de esta semana 17?!

No se preocupen, estaré retroalimentando los trabajos de la semana 15. Manden trabajos y dudas al correo manuel.lopez@colegio-auroradechile.cl